Forex trading is highly speculative in nature, which can mean currency prices may become extremely volatile. Forex trading is highly leveraged; since low margin deposits normally are required, an extremely high degree of leverage is obtainable in foreign exchange trading. A relatively small market movement will have a proportionately larger impact on the funds you have deposited. You may sustain a total loss of your funds. An initial deposit of $1000 will allow you to control a position of $100,000 notional value with 100:1 leverage. If you were to maximize your leverage, a market move over 1% would cause you to lose your entire cash balance. Since the possibility of losing your entire cash balance does exist, speculation in the Forex market should only be conducted with risk capital you can afford to lose which will not dramatically impact your lifestyle.

Only you can determine whether trading in foreign currencies is suitable for you. However, in light of the information above, Alpari asks that you carefully consider the risk associated with such trading. If the only form of investing that you have pursued in the past has been conservative in nature, then Alpari encourages you to study Forex trading prior to making any final decisions and recognize that only risk capital is suitable for such trading.
